JACK LESSENBERRY JOINS GROWING TEAM AT SUPERSTATION 910 AM

DETROIT – National Emmy award-winning news analyst, journalist, broadcaster and professor Jack Lessenberry is joining a growing team of distinguished news professionals at Superstation 910 AM

Lessenberry, a former foreign correspondent for the Detroit News and the current head of journalism at Wayne State University will begin hosting a two-hour show from 9 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday.

“I’m excited to have Jack, the father of journalism who taught many of my staff here at my media companies, join the 910AM Superstation family. Jack will bring a wealth of in-depth knowledge and expertise to the station” says CEO Kevin Adell.

“For my part, I am excited to be part of the exciting future that Kevin and his team are building at 910,” Lessenberry said. “We’re going to be doing some things you might never expect, shake people up and make them think, and the goal is never to be boring.”

Lessenberry, a Detroit native, won an Emmy for a Frontline documentary he helped report and produce in 1994. He hosts a weekly television show in Toledo, and has written for everyone from the New York Times to Vanity Fair and Esquire.
